LIGHTING GAS BY ELECTRICITY.—The Senate was not in session yesterday, and a large number of gentlemen and ladies visited the Senate chamber to witness the novel operation of lighting the large chandelier ighting and regulating the light in public buildings, and House Medicines, and who will supply them at my lowtheatres, and other places where a great deal of gas is est wholesale price.

By means of this invention, the street lights of a city, or those in the different rooms of a public edifice, can be lighted, regulated, or extinguished at one locality, and without trouble. It also saves a large amount of gas, as by the present arrangement there must be a set of service pipes, simply used for lighing, or the work must be commenced some time previous to the hour when the

A New Way of Courting.

About three months since a young Parisian, traveling in Germany, took the road from Augsburg to Berlin.-In the car he selected were four other persons, two mammas and two daughters both very lovely. The two mothers were face to face in one corner, the young man took the opposite, and found himself face to face with the young ladies. The young man put on a distraught and absent air. The conductor came to demand the tickets. The young man paid no attention at all, when the request was many time repeated-Roused from his reverie in presence of the ladies, the young man had recourse to a ruse, to avoid exciting ridicule. "What are you saying?" said he. "Why do you not speak French?" The conductor then explained by signs, the ticket was changed and the young man returned to his return mail. reverie. And not to enjoy it long, for this time the young ladies aroused him. They began in full voice. "This young man is a very handsome one," said one. "Hist, Bertha," said the other, with a sort of affright.

"Why, he doesn't know a word of German. We can talk freely. How do you find him?" "Only ordinary." "You are difficult. He has a charming figure and distingue air."

"Would you marry a Frenchman?" "Why not, if he looked like this one, and was spirited, well born and amiable? But I can hardly keep from laughing. See, he doesn't mistrust what we are saying."

The young traveler was endowed with a great power of self-control, and he had preserved his absent and inattentive air all the time, and while the dialogue continued, he thought how curiously his attempt to avert a laugh by pretending not to know German had resulted. He looked carefully at Bertha, and his resolution was taken. At a new station, the conductor came again for the tickets. Our young man, with extra elaboration, and in excellent German, said :-"Ah, you want my ticket. Very well; let me see;

I believe it is in my port monnaie. Oh, yes, here it is." The effect of the coup-de-theatre was startling. Bertha nearly fainted away, but soon recovered under the polite apologies of the young Frenchman. They were pleased with each other, and in a few weeks Bertha ratified her good opinion of the young man and her willingness to marry a Frenchman. They live at Hamburg.
